So they lost the game, the Romulus 1986 Homecoming was a big success with many people attending both the game on Friday night and the dance on Saturday night. The weekend event was kicked-off with a parade down Goddard Road and the game followed. The Romulus Eagles may have lost to the Saginaw Nouvel with a score of 31-12 but that didn't stop these persistent cheerleaders, pictured below. Highlights of the half-time activities were the selection of the 1986 Homecoming King and Queen, Mark Dubayk and Larraine, above. In special attendance were kings and queens from the other towns with

City crime escalates

Mayor initiates police 'action plan'

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

"Three houses on my block have been broken into during the last month," said one resident in Northwest Romulus after burglars robbed her nextdoor neighbor's home the night before. "They robbed a house last week and stole everything but the furniture."

"It's a real problem," conceded Mary Ann Banks before members of the Romulus City Council last week. "Crime is happening in neighborhoods where it never happened before."

During the same meeting, one resident pleaded for council members to help him. He said his property was constantly being vandalized by local criminals. "What can I do?" he asked.

ACTION PLAN

- Make maximum use of available manpower to give more visibility of police throughout the city.
- Strategic deployment of officers in target areas based upon crime statistics.
- Increased "residential patrols" with unmarked police vehicles and uniform officers.
- Increased narcotics investigation.
- Emphasis on follow-up investigations by the detective bureau.
- To continue with the departmental efforts in Crime Prevention and Neighborhood Watch Programs.
- Utilize the reserve officers to augment the uniformed patrol force with increased visibility in potential areas.

No solutions were offered. Statistics reflect a definite increase, according to Police Chief Charles Wilmoth, for both the first quarter of the year and the month of October.

"The crime continues to escalate," he said. "As evidenced by considerably more crime activity, 10 percent over the same time last year. Residents are reporting more crimes and if anything, that's encouraging because it demonstrates a certain faith in the department."

Wilmoth noted that recent efforts to curb crime have proved less successful. Around the city, residents are becoming increasingly alarmed with the frequency of crime.

Mayor Beverly McAnally said she receives at least two calls a day complaining about the crime problem in the city.

"This problem is not unique to Romulus. Every mayor I have talked with is experiencing the same thing. I want people to know we are aware of the problem and intend to correct and control the problem," she said.

Last Friday, under increasing pressure from citizens in the community, an "Action Plan" against crime was introduced by the mayor.

"We must recast enemy for crime. We are our own worst enemy," noted Wilmoth. "Crooks are not dumb and why should we make it easy for them. Neighborhood Watch is one way people can protect their property. They interact with us and we respond to them," he said.

"The 'Action Plan' is geared toward the more serious crimes against people.

"We intend to address the narcotics situation. Today drugs are a way of life and drugs and crime go hand in hand. Residents know where the drug action is. They can share that information with us because we are confidential," he added.

Other crimes which have shown an increase in activity so far this year are: burglaries, up 20 percent; robberies, up 10 percent; auto theft, up 48 percent; and rape, up 125 percent.

In September crimes included: One homicide, six rapes, eight robberies, 13 assaults, 65 burglaries, 102 larcenies, 30 auto thefts and seven arsons.

The local department continues to arrest criminals with an increase in arrests from last year.

'Son of Super Sewer' OK sought

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

The Department of Natural Resources has lifted the moratorium against any new building in northwest Romulus, according to Building director David Paul, who made the announcement at the meeting of the members of the city council Monday evening. The action follows the result of many years of discussion between local communities, Wayne County and the Environmental Protection Agency about what has been dubbed the, "Son of Super Sewer" project.

The area in question is a very small part of the entire projected $85 million project which will serve 16 communities including Wixom, Novi, Northville, Plymouth, Livonia, Canton Township, Westland, Garden City, Redford, Dearborn Heights, Inkster, Wayne, and small parts of Van Buren Township and Romulus.

"The cost to Romulus would be $81,000 to be paid over a three-year period. The decision to join the sewer project is necessary by Nov. 1," stated Paul. The cost to other communities ranges from $5 million in Dearborn Heights, $3 million in Westland, $2 million in Wayne and $818 thousand in Inkster.

The area in question, bounded by Hannan, Tyler, Cogswell and Van Born roads would be open for future development should council decide to participate in the project.

At the present time only a small sewer serves this area of Romulus. "The city would receive benefits from the project in the future. If approved, we could handle any development in the area.

The Wayne County Board of Public Works is the administrator of the project.

"All cities and townships must approve this project by Nov. 1 or risk losing the 50 percent federal findings of the project, if the project would continue at all," said Paul.

The project is already in jeopardy as a result of a vote by the Canton Township board to withdraw from the project. Their share amounted to $17 million.

Murder trial begins in O'Day stabbing death

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

Bob O'Day, Sr. hesitates and his voice quivers slightly as he vividly recalls the tragic death of his son Jan. 31.

After 12 years of living and working in Romulus, he and his wife, Mary, moved to New Mexico this past summer. The family originally came to Romulus from Arizona.

Last week, he returned alone to Romulus and since last Tuesday, sits on a bench in the courtroom of Judge Maureen O'Reilly on the 19th floor of the City-County Building. Each day he listens to the testimony of witnesses in the trial of Dar-ryl Johnson of Inkster, the 17-year-old Inkster youth accused of stabbing his son to death in the halls of Romulus High School.

He admitted that being away from Romulus has helped to relieve the pain of losing an only son. "Out of sight is out of mind. But it's still kind of tough. His mother is taking this very hard," he stated.

The return to Romulus brings back many memories both pleasant and tragic. "I wanted to be here. I felt that maybe my presence would make a difference. My wife is too broken up to come," he explained.

"The whole trial is kind of crazy," he said. "They are trying to paint a picture of my son as being a gorilla. Like he aggravated the situation. This kid admitted that he killed Bobby. There's no doubt that he did it. But you never know what's going on in the mind of a jury," O'Day said.

Bob O'Day Jr. was captain of both the football and wrestling team. He was 5'10" and 203

"The lawsuit is intended to bring attention to the security problem in the school. Several problems were earlier identified and the school elected to ignore them."

pounds according to his father. "Not the 6'4" monster they tried to make him out to be," he said.

He recalled specific details of the incident and the events which led up to the stabbing. "Four kids came to back door of the school looking for a teammate of Bobby's. When confronted by the coach, they became insistent and belligerent. The coach tried to usher them out and they came from behind and started to hit him. At this time my son got involved as well as several students.

The O'Day family has since filed suit against the Romulus schools. "Parents have a right to send their children to school and expect them to be responsible for their safety. Usually parents put their kids on the bus and feel relief. Not so in Romulus. I believe this is the only murder of a child in a school in Romulus," he said.

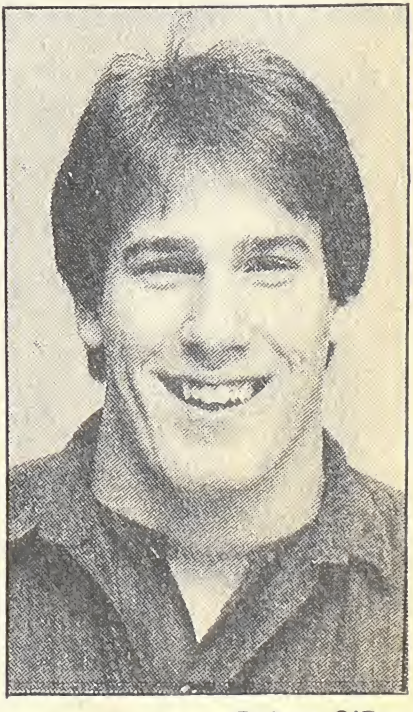

Only one school board member personally offered condolences to the O'Day family since the incident, according to O'Day. "No calls, nothing. The lawsuit is intended to bring attention to the security problem in the school. Several problems were earlier identified and the school elected to ignore them," he stated.

The family has since initiated a memorial scholarship fund. "It's a four-year, full-ride scholarship to Western New Mexico University. This year it was awarded to Bob Crane. And although we got off to a rocky start, as to how the scholarship would operate, it's fine now," conceded O'Day.

A 14-panel jury was selected last Tuesday. Testimony from the first of 43 subpoenaed witnesses began the following day, according to Romulus Detective Dan Synder. "The defense should present their case this week with closing arguments by the end of the week. We don't know if Johnson will speak on his own behalf," Synder said.

"We want the boy to have a fair trial as well as any damage or slander to our son's name vindicated. No matter what the jury decides, it wouldn't bring back our son. But something has to be done about security in the schools. If one kid's life can be saved, this effort will be worth it," said O'Day.

Romulus job and employment training program lauded

By BOB DENYS
ANP Staff Writer

More than 100 elected officials and business representatives from the Downriver and Western Wayne County areas stormed the Romulus Hilton last Wednesday and the issue was anything but cloudy.

They gathered to praise a local employment and job training program. The program as well as the luncheon, was sponsored by the Downriver Community Conference.

"This program has given Downriver a notoriety, a 'good notoriety,'" noted special guest speaker Edward McNamara, mayor of Livonia for 17 years and presently candidate for Wayne County executive.

He emphasized the importance of selecting Romulus as the site of this, the second annual DCC luncheon. "Romulus is a new frontier," he said. "As more and more industries decide that the location of Romulus offers a real economic advantage, the DCC does not only create the jobs for employment but solicits new business for that employment. It's a valuable asset. Nowhere in the United States is the program working as well as in the Downriver area," he stated.

The program became especially important during the past few years when the top 15 Downriver employers lost 60 percent of their work force, according to Kathleen Alessandro, director of employment and training at the DCC.

"Eight thousand people came to the DCC this past year looking for work. Two thousand enrolled in the program and we found employment for 1,400. The figure is significant yet demonstrates we have a long way to go," she said.

Dewey Henry, executive director of the DCC added, "The vibrant growth and activity in Romulus is exciting and the DCC is happy to host this event in the home of our newest member."

"Mayor McNally is among the outstanding people of Michigan. The development around us is a tribute to her capabilities. Nothing happens without leadership and we are happy to see her at the helm while Romulus grows," he said.

When McNally addressed the audience, she welcomed them to the heart of Romulus. "It's a priority that we put people back to work. The DCC employment and job training programs help screen people who are actively looking for work. The DCC has been a great resource for businesses not only with their employment but also for continued economic expansion and development."

McNamara ended his speech with a quote from a plaque that sits on President Reagan's desk. "I don't always agree with the president's policies," said the Democratic mayor about the Republican president. "But I think we can all agree with this adage from the president's desk. 'People can accomplish anything they want if no one worries about who will take credit for the accomplishment.'"

The Downriver Community Conference, has an unusual problem.

The organization is seeking to provide employment and job training services to Romulus residents, but to date only a handful of local people have taken advantage of the free services.

The program opened its doors to Romulus residents on July 1. Since then, several city employers have received successful assistance utilized the job placement services of the agency, although agency spokesman admit that there is a serious shortage of job applicants in the Romulus area.

The DCC offers five major programs: 1) employment and job training; 2) substance abuse; 3) home and business wealth-erization; 4) the arts council and 5) economic development.

"Our employment and job training program has been a prototype for others around the country," noted Fred Darin, business assistant with the DCC. "Many acts of Congress have been passed as a result of this program," he added.

"No downriver city alone would be able to qualify for federal money to support this program. But together in the DCC, we meet the requirement of a population over 250,000, necessary to receive federal funds," said Rudy McCullough, senior job developer.

"The program offers everything to the individual looking for a job. If they need medical assistance, emergency food, transportation, a shave or a haircut to go on an interview, we will do whatever is necessary to assist these people in their hunt for a job," emphasized McCullough.

The DCC offers the program to two groups of people: those with low income and the permanently laid-off.

Classes at the DCC teach job seeking skills in a course called, "Project Self Reliance." Customized training through local employers offer on-location classroom experience, in the factory or business. The DCC will reimburse the employer for involvement and the employee training.

"This program has the reputation of being very cost effective," noted Jim Perry, program director. "We work with business to help coordinate activities at the state and federal level. Our goal is to initiate programs that help them stay competitive in the job market," he said.

Central Distributors of Romulus has employed at least 10 workers through the program during the past three years. "When there a position in our company, we use the services of the DCC," said Central Distributor President John Colina.

"The program works for us," he said.

"They've helped me not only get a job but a career," said Central employee Ken McPhaul, hired through the DCC employment and job training program.

The ANNUAL CITY AUCTION will be conducted on Saturday, Oct. 25. At that time, all surplus, unusable and confiscated properties will go for sale on the auction block.

AN ARMED ROBBERY occurred early Monday morning on Van Born near Merriman roads, according to Romulus police. An employee at a gas station was approached by one male subject while another stood guard at the door. He demanded money and in the process fired one shot. "No one was injured. Apparently, he fired the shot to convince the leery attendant they meant business," explained Lieutenant Ken Kraus. The suspects fled in an older vehicle.

SATELLITE TELEVISION ANTENNAS or disks were regulated by members of the city council on Monday night. Specifications would be no different than those already in effect for television or radio antennas for both location and height. The new regulations would not apply to residents who already own such structures, according to council.

year of 40 percent or 1,378 individuals. Requests for service by residents has also increased by 24 percent.

"We intend to place particular emphasis on rapid police response time. The city will beef up patrols and hire more officers. More overtime is authorized. We're going to get tough. Parents will be held accountable for the actions of their children. The city's first responsibility is its citizens. And now we want results and relief from this crime problem," added McNally.

dan's dogs

This is being written specifically for all you "macho" people out there. You know who you are.

- Macho people feel larger-than-life when they walk around with a large breed dog. Anything smaller could possibly give the impression the macho person is a pansy. (This is not to say anyone owning a large dog is suspect. The macho person is quite obvious.)
- The macho person is never seen being the least bit demonstrative toward his dog. He couldn't stoop that low because affection is a sign of weakness. (Just ask his wife or girlfriend.)
- The macho person likes when his dog misbehaves so that he can severely correct him. There is never any evaluation on Macho Person's part as to why the dog acts a certain way or performs poorly. Using any amount of empathy is beyond his scope of reason.
- The macho person may brag about building his dog the dan morris

biggest and most expensive doghouse in the neighborhood. No amount of money is spared. Now the dog can spend 99 percent of the time alone, bored, pestered by insects and pests of the two-legged variety and can feel neglected, unproductive, unloved or appreciated. But as far as the macho person is concerned, "show" is the name of the game, and he "shows" how much he invests into having a dog by building him his own house.

- The macho person likes the physical aspect involved in training his dog. He doesn't do his homework or train with his dog during the week, so when in class his dog acts up, the macho person often tries to kick or beat the dog into performing well. (Obviously, the macho person gets away with that only one time in our school. If he tries that again ... out the door he goes.)

- When the macho person's spouse gets on the floor with the dog during class, he sits back correcting every move, snickering at every mistake. He forgets how ridiculous he appears when he's having difficulty with a command technique. That's different, though.
- The macho person is never satisfied.

Dogs, like people, need respect. Don't buy a dog just to show off. Don't buy a dog to isolate it. Don't buy a dog to mistreat it. Don't buy a dog for any reason other than love, companionship, loyalty and devotion. Dogs give this automatically. Humans have to learn how.

Why two when one will do?

Apparently, 1,338 voters can be wrong. That appears to be the conviction of a group of Westland citizens determined to obtain funding for a city library, at any rate.

Just last spring, 1,338 people decisively cast their votes during a special election saying that a Westland library was not worth an increased 1-mill in taxes to them. They defeated the 1,019 voters who felt that the library was worth that additional tax money.

Now, supporters of the library are actively pursuing state money to build and support a Westland library...a lofty idea if it were not for the fact that support of the neighboring Wayne facility may be jeopardized by this action. Presently, Wayne and Westland share a facility at Wayne Road and Sims Street. Last year, the two cities combined their populations to apply for a state grant which allowed them to renovate the interior of the library facility. This year, plans had been made to again use the double population to apply for enough funding to repair and improve the parking lot and provide some exterior work.

The state grants are determined, in part, by the population the facility serves. By adding the Wayne and Westland citizenry together for the purposes of these applications, the library facility was able to qualify for far more funding than would either city alone.

Commitments were made, plans drawn up and applications all but prepared on the basis of the two municipalities combining forces to obtain the grants. Now, Westland appears to be balking at fulfilling the obligations and the effort to fund a Westland facility has surfaced again.

Presently, two thirds of the readers served by the Wayne facility live in Westland--which would indicate that the city is getting good value for any funding allotted the library. If another library is needed in Westland, why would this move at this time be necessary, when voters have so recently voiced their opinions on the matter?

There is no criticism of the attempt to provide more library service and a city facility in Westland--it is probably a good idea, providing the city can afford it and voters want it. Those two conditions, however, should be paramount in the support of any such effort.

They do not seem to be present in this instance, however. Voters have had the opportunity to settle this question, and have done so. It would seem wiser to fulfill the city commitment to improvement and restoration of the present facility before moving on to adding another at the taxpayer's expense.

We would urge the members of the group pushing this forward to close the book, temporarily at least, on this issue. The handwriting is, after all, on the wall.

A letter to the President

Dear President Reagan:

This is a letter from a concerned citizen...a very concerned citizen. This is a letter from an individual who feels that he has attempted to become a part of the solution of a serious problem facing our country today, only to be rebuffed and insulted by his president.

My concerns center around your failure to demonstrate support for the continuation of a strong United States Small Business Administration. I find this very disturbing.

As an appointed delegate to the 1980 White House Conference on Small Business, I went to Washington with a hope, and very little else. I thought that perhaps the delegates collectively would be able, in some small way, to change the environment in America in which small business was struggling to survive. To my delight and surprise, Washington did listen.

Slowly, through the years since that conference, the climate for small business which is the promise of tomorrow, did improve. The Michigan delegation to that 1980 conference was successful in meeting with Gov. William Milliken during a state conference of small business people.

As one of 10 appointed representatives charged by the governor to plan and coordinate this first-ever meeting, I saw and felt the spirit that moved within those who were a part of it all.

This state is, indeed, fortunate to have an organization now called the Small Business Association of Michigan. I have been serving on the SBAM board of directors now for a number of years, and am now honored to be serving as first vice president of this group.

Last fall, I was elected as a delegate to the 1986 White House Conference, along with nearly 2,000 others, nationwide, who traveled to Washington in August, each at his or her own expense.

Prior to the August meeting, each of these delegates became aware of the movement toward reducing the SBA to a mere division of the Commerce Department. The appointment of an acting director of SBA was another startling development, indicating that your intention was to diminish the SBA.

Then, delegates were met upon their arrival with the news that you, Mr. President, had left for vacation and would not even be present to meet with us. In contrast to President Carter's eloquent move to leave the White House for the first time since his self-imposed isolation during the Iranian hostage situation to meet with us in 1980, your absence was shocking, to say the least.

During that meeting, Rosalyn Carter graciously greeted each delegate individually as we filed through the White House during our visit there. This was certainly a sharp contrast to the perceived snub we received from you this year.

We are all aware, Mr. President, of the pressures of the presidency from all quarters. Deficit spending, unfavorable balance of trade, disarmament, summit discussions and the day-to-day crisis of administering this country must be your top priorities. There is, however, a growing feeling of betrayal among many who voted for you, have supported you and who have given you their trust.

The latest offense is the certificate sent to thank the delegates for their participation at the conference. It's an impressive document, signed not by our president, as Mr. Carter took the time to do, but by Ralph Stanley, who directed the conference. You not only chose not to meet with us, Mr. President, but you couldn't even find the time to thank the men and women who spent their valuable time, energy and hard-earned money in an attempt to solve problems that face this country with as small a thing as your signature. Strange, you did find time to personally sign campaign literature you sent to me, but not this certificate.

Time after time

Did they, or didn't they?

That appears to be the question before members of the Belleville City Council who have been accused of violations of the Open Meetings Act by City Clerk Agnes Frisch.

Frisch claims that meetings have taken place in the office of the city manager and that a recent visit to the site of a complaint in the city violate the law which provides for public access to all meetings where a quorum might be present.

We do not know whether Frisch is right or wrong...that is known only by those involved. We admire Frisch's actions in the matter, however, in calling these actions to the attention of the members of the board prior to taking further action through the courts.

This is the second instance of apparent violations of the city charter or state law by the newly elected Belleville officials. Most recently, the controversy regarding zoning at a fruit market resulted in threatened legal action, and a great deal of bad feeling and publicity for the city.

The men and women elected to administer the business of the city are not attorneys, nor are they practiced politicians. They are citizens who sought office with a desire to serve their community, which is admirable. That service, however, comes with a high price tag, payable only in hours and hours of valuable time.

Any local politician can relate the number of unpaid and private hours spent in research, reading and homework in an effort to properly fulfill an elected position on a council or board. This is not an easy job, it takes time, effort and concentration, and many more hours than ever become public.

We do not suspect any malice or deliberate wrongdoing on the part of these officials, what we do see is a group of people who need to learn the rules by which they must administer their city government.

We would urge each of the Belleville officials to take the time to become familiar with the city charter, the open meetings act and Robert's Rules of Order. It will be time well spent and is necessary to the successful governing of the city.

We applaud Ms. Frisch for her efforts to help these people govern in a proper and legal way, and we hope that each of them will learn a lesson from her disclosures regarding their conduct.

Nobody ever said it was going to be easy.

'Read More' book store blasted

To The Editor:

A serious situation has come upon us in our city. The city commission and city council approved site plans for leasing, selling, and repairing of video cassette recorders. I can think of three such stores here in Wayne and they are very nice places of business.

However, this new store "Read More" now has the facilities for "Peep Shows", along with adult books, magazines, sexually oriented paraphernalia, and drug paraphernalia.

It seems when store officials came before the city they did not tell the "whole truth" about the real intent of their stores business. Obviously this type of business-person and this type of business is not welcome here.

One of the reasons I live in this city is because of all the neighboring cities, Wayne seems to be the most "wholesome" family oriented city. When places like this start slipping in, there's nothing special to make me want to live here any longer.

I certainly hope the City of Wayne will examine their codes and guidelines and perhaps more carefully word them and enforce them. If a video store can become a xxx store along with drug accessories just because they sell videos, can our local pubs become topless just because they sell liquor?

I will be watching to see if the city can shut the doors on our Sodom and Gomorrah. Birds of a feather flock together and we don't need anymore of those birds in our neighborhood.

Church groups picketing the store may or may not help. But if everyone steered clear of the store, certainly they would close their own doors and go away.

Romulus councilman is praised

To the Editor:

On Monday Oct. 6, 1986, Councilman William Wadsworth of the City of Romulus, spoke to the Romulus Adult Education Class.

The class is presently studying all forms of government. Councilman Wadsworth explained the workings of the Romulus City Council, the duties and responsibilities, and how we as citizens of the city can play a part in its operation.

It was a rewarding experience to have someone that is concerned enough to come and make such a presentation.

The students of the class "Community Forum", would like to give our thanks to Councilman William Wadsworth for his time and concern.

State 'buys' Belleville

The desired property consists of two connecting parcels along Rawsonville Road. The land may be used for the construction of a launch facility for small fishing boats and bank fishing, Kosteva said.

Funds for the project have already been approved by the state Legislature.

To ensure that Michigan residents get the most out of programs which are supported by their tax dollars, several departments of the state government have set up informational telephone hotlines. By calling these special numbers, many of which are toll free, business people, concerned citizens, hunters and tourists can receive practical and valuable information.

For instance, the Department of Labor has a hotline that can help Michigan business people find the best unemployment compensation insurance. Employers who are looking for better rates or coverage can call 1-800-523-7890 and receive assistance from the state.

The state police have set up two toll free telephone hotlines to be used by citizens who want to report suspected criminal activities. Any Michigan motorist who spots another driver who appears to be intoxicated should call 1-800-525-5555. As part of the state police Operation HEMP, a program aimed at stopping the growing of marijuana in Michigan, anyone who suspects that property is being used to grow the weed is urged to call 1-800-235-HEMP. The legislature asked the state police to establish another hotline, to be used by citizens to report any suspected illegal drug trafficking or pushing.

There are toll free numbers which can help travelers in Michigan. People with comments or complaints about any of the 78 state rest areas can call the Department of Transportation hotline at 1-800-654-8787. Reports about burned out lights, broken glass, unclean conditions or other non-emergency problems are referred to an MDOT maintenance crew. If a traveler calls the hotline number with a concern about personal safety, the department immediately contacts the appropriate police agency.

In order to make sure that visitors to the state fully enjoy their fall color tour or other Michigan vacation, the Department of Commerce offers free information through their toll free number, 1-800-543-2YES. State residents can also call for the most up-to-date information about travel opportunities close to home.

Died: Miss Nora Miller on October 7 of Typhoid Pneumonia. To her parents, brothers and sisters the loss is irreparable. In her they have lost a loving daughter and a kind sister whose interest seemed to be the welfare of the family circle. Sadly we close the last page in this truly good life.

Another voter for Belleville: It can be found on Liberty Street at the residence of John Clark and wife. He only comes down for 8 pounds now but he will grow. The date of his arrival here was Sunday October 10.

A pound social and reception was given Rev. J. L. Hewson last evening at the parsonage and the many who were there thoroughly enjoyed his hearty welcome and wide-spread hospitality. (A pound social is a cash donation party.)

Notice to the tax payers of the Township of Van Buren: There will be a meeting of the tax payers of Van Buren at the Town Hall on Saturday October 16, 1886 at 2 o'clock for the purpose of advising in regard to the Township law suit. Julia Abernethy against the Township of Van Buren. Let all come.

Have you forgotten? The first grand ball of the season will be held at Grange Hall next Friday evening under the auspices of the Belleville Cornet Band. Give the boys your patronage for they are trying to get new uniforms. Bill only 50 cents.

Belleville High School notes: Five of the class of '86 are engaged in teaching school. "Resolved that the cow is more useful than the horse," is the question for discussion at the lyceum Friday.

cate of appreciation for my efforts to serve.

If we are looking for a revitalized economy, then we must properly recognize where the growth and jobs are in our country today, and where they will come from in the future. That revitalization will be with small business.

If we want to shift the skew of the international trade picture, there is no mystery about where the greatest potential is for positive change. That change is with small business.

We must plant the seeds of tomorrow if we expect the harvest to be there, and we must cultivate carefully if we expect the yield to increase. Small business is the answer, and it would appear that the man in whom we have placed our faith and trust may be the only one without that confidence and knowledge.

Mr. President, we all recognize that it is the time for change. The recommendations from the August White House Conference should, and I hope will, be taken seriously.

Even your Chief of Staff Don Regan promised the delegates to the conference that there would be movement on the matter of the SBA and that a new permanent director would be appointed. To date, there has been no word on that matter. I ask you to renew your support of small business by deviating from your intended course to weaken the SBA. I ask you appoint a permanent director. The debate has gone on too long.

The Democratic administration in Michigan has recognized that the future, if there is to be one, centers on a fertile field in which small business can grow. I ask you to recognize that the same exists on a national level, and to realize that the power for the correction of our national course lies, too, with small business. I ask you to start moving to strengthen, rather than weaken, the hope of tomorrow.

I await your response.

Very truly yours,
David J. Willett
